DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Berger et al. (5,510,981)

As to claims 1-3, Berger teaches a computer implemented method for natural language translation of a source/first language into a target/second language, comprising the steps of:

Receiving a source text and generating at least two target hypothesis (translations);

Calculating a "target hypothesis match score" (translation probability) that is a combination of two different models which are a language model match score and a translation match score; and

Identifying and outputting the translation with the highest translation probability (abstract; Fig.1)

As to claim 4, Berger teaches where the source language is translated using a bilingual dictionary (Fig.1, 14).

Application/Control Number: 09/757,836

Art Unit: 2655

As to claim 5, Berger teaches where the translation match score includes probability of the occurrence of the source given the target word in one of the target hypothesis (abstract).

Claims 6-16 are analogous to claims 1-5 and are rejected for the foregoing reasons by Berger.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-16 have been considered but are most in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Brown et al. (5,477,451) also teaches as shown below the subject matter of the present invention

'The source text is first transduced into one or more intermediate structural representations. From these intermediate source structures a set of intermediate target-structure hypotheses is generated. These hypotheses are scored by two different models: a language model which assigns a probability or score to an intermediate target structure, and a translation model which assigns a probability or score to the event that an intermediate target structure is translated into an intermediate source structure.

Scores from the translation model and language model are combined into a combined score for each intermediate target-structure hypothesis. Finally, a set of target-text hypotheses is produced by transducing the highest scoring target-structure hypotheses into portions of text in the target language.' See the abstract.
